I imagine a school that has a huge musical park. It would be the perfect classroom for writing new songs. Everything in the park is a musical instrument. The stairs are giant piano keys. When you walk down them they play different notes. The slides are shaped like tubas. When kids slide down them they make low tuba sounds. Instead of swings, there are huge trombones. Each time the slide goes in and out you can make trombone tunes. You can go fast or slow. The hopscotch is made of drums. Each time you jump it goes boom, boom, boom. Kids swing from triangle to triangle. My favorite instrument, the guitar, makes a fence around the park.

I imagine all my classmates playing in the musical park. We take turns playing each instrument. Then we all work together to write our new beautiful songs. I think that would be an awesome place to learn about music.
