I imagine that if all students could attend music class in this nation, kids would love to learn how to read music. They would learn what rhythm is and they would learn how to read songs. I think even if a school doesn't have enough money to buy books, they should at least use fairy tales to make up songs. Music teaches children how to interact through songs learned in music class. Songs children learn in music class teach lessons about life, love and patriotism. Every kid deserves to be in a group of kids that are singing. I think America would be filled with more hope and joy if every student could experience music. Music bonds people together so if everyone in school could attend music classes, children would be united.
