I imagine that everything you say, do, or write was music. If every word was Do, Re, Mi, and on and on, if everything you wrote were music notes, or everything you did was a dance with folk, jazz, rock, any type of music you could imagine. I imagine everyone had the gift to sing, high and low. I imagine everyone could dance their heart out and no one would care if you did an embarrassing dance move. Everyone would be happy, and everyone would be a friend, with a gift of music. I imagine music would change people's lives forever. Everything would be music notes and everyone would love music. The people would sing along the streets without a care in the world. Inside my house, the chairs are piano seats, and the walls covered in music notes. The wind would be soft whispers of music and even the ants, spiders, monkeys, fish, and every animal could sing – just like birds. Life would be great, no wars, no fights, no evil glances. Life would just be peaceful. I imagine there would be nothing wrong in the world because music would fill the streets with rhythms of music. Everything would be wonderful if we just had music all the time.
