I imagine a world fueled all by pure music, nothing else. All energy is fueled by music. Just imagine the gas and oil crisis solved simply by a single tune. Watch out world planes, trains, and cars: now all simply fueled by turning on your radio and singing along with your favorite song!

How is this possible? Imagine a long wavering symphony powering a car for a long road trip. A quick trip to the grocery store powered by a short campfire song. Airplane rides fueled by higher notes and submarines fueled by low notes. All trips powered by different lengths of music in fact the only thing the same about this is the sharing of musical fuel.

Not only would this solve the oil crisis also it would solve the world's money crisis for the government and everybody else in America. This would also save the economy. Other things this would solve are our worries about our relations with foreign countries. America's problems all solved by the newest number one song in the country.

In closing I would like to say that if music could fuel the world then Mother Nature would free us of our wrong doings. She would also forgive us of stripping her from her goods such as fossil oil and polluting her with chemicals that come from burning gas and other materials. That's it America now think about it could this dream come true.
